Applying Online

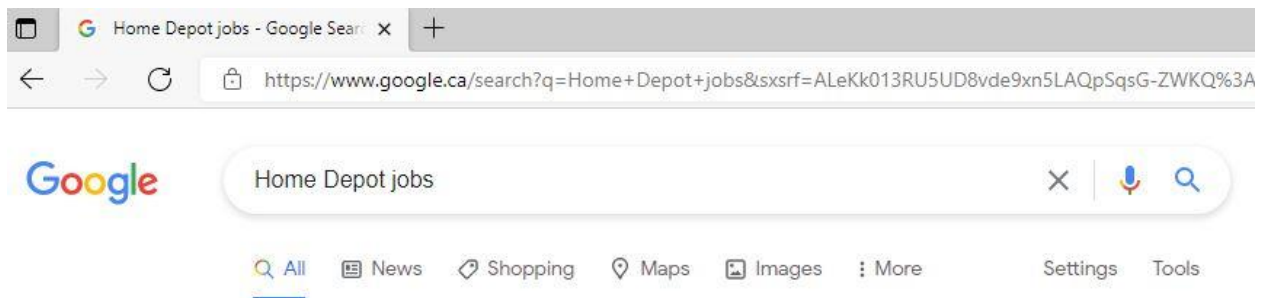

Many companies now post open positions online. You can search out the position you want as well as the location. Once you determine the position and location you will select the job and it will give a description of the duties and skills you will require. If you are satisfied this is what you want to do there will be a button that usually says Apply Now for you to continue.

To begin your search of companies online you may do a couple of things.

Search out the company using only the name of the company, if you select only the company name you will have to search the company website for career or employment opportunities:

Or you can add the word jobs or careers to limit your search; this will take you directly to the career or employment opportunities page:

Select the link for jobs or careers for that company. Since you narrowed your search to only websites related to jobs for Home Depot they have come to the top of the search. As you can see there are several choices for Home Depot jobs. Select the one you think is appropriate:

Once you select search jobs, many positions may pop up. In many cases when you choose a position, a job description will open. The next window to open will ask you to create a user account. Most employers ask you to create a user so that you can customize your job searching tools for the site. In some cases, employers may email you job opportunities that are suited to you in the future based on the information in your user account.

Let's walk through the process of applying online.

Create a User Account

User Name:	Job Seeker
Password:	Unique numbers and letters
Re-enter password:	Unique numbers and letters
Select a security question:	What was the first school you attended
Answer to your security question:	Grade school - use the name

Attaching a Resume or Cover Letter

You can attach a file, but it must have an acceptable extension. An extension is the identification letters at the end of the document name. For example: jobsearch.docx, the .docx is the extension. Each company will indicate which type of file it will accept, usually by indicating the acceptable extensions.

Enter your information

In some cases, employers will not accept attachments and will require you to enter the information into a set format. This will require you typing in everything from your cover letter to your resume.
